MARKET COMMENTARY

The Philippine fixed income market maintained its positive momentum in November, supported by softer domestic growth, subdued inflation, and expectations of continued BSP policy easing. Global developments, including stable U.S. economic data, ongoing accommodative stances from major central banks, and easing U.S. political uncertainty, helped anchor sentiment and keep yields stable or lower, benefiting emerging market bonds. Domestically, weak Q3 GDP growth and steady inflation prospects reinforced the case for further monetary easing, with robust demand at government auctions reflecting investor confidence. Yields declined by an average of 9 basis points, particularly in the belly of the curve, aligning with a strategic overweight duration stance. While the environment remains conducive for Philippine bonds amid easing cycles and contained inflation risks, global geopolitical and policy shifts continue to warrant cautious monitoring.
