MARKET COMMENTARY

In July, global equities rose 1.3%, driven by strong performances from Chinese and U.S. large-caps, with notable outperformance in AI-related sectors and broader areas supporting AI infrastructure, such as Utilities, Industrials, and Energy. The market saw a surge in speculative stocks, partly fueled by short squeezes, while defensive sectors like Healthcare, Consumer Staples, and REITs lagged. U.S. fixed income yields increased despite contained inflation, with credit markets rallying on resilient economic data. The fund maintained a 61% equity allocation, favoring high-quality growth in AI, Financials, and Consumer Discretionary, primarily in the U.S., with regional tilts reflecting macro outlooks. Duration was extended slightly, emphasizing income over duration, with a strategic allocation to credit, gold, and currency hedges. Overall, the fund balances growth, income, and risk management amid ongoing macro uncertainties.
