MARKET COMMENTARY

Third quarter earnings reflect favorable guidance, elevated hyperscaler capex, AI adoption, labor efficiency as well as benign credit conditions. Companies remain on track with tariff absorption and AI investments through 2026, supporting continued earnings growth. Consumer spending remains stable but early signs of strain are already seen in lower-income households. Financials benefit from strong margins and credit quality, while healthcare sentiment improves amid clearer policies and increased M&A. Industrials see steady demand, though longer-term projects face tariff uncertainties. Despite strong AI infrastructure demand, investor sentiment weakens over funding and scalability concerns. Markets price in 2026 with expectations of lower rates and deregulation, but elevated valuations call for cautious selectivity.

Since the target fund is USD-denominated, the return of this peso share class fund was slightly affected by a slight movement between the Philippine peso and the US dollar.
