MARKET COMMENTARY

Global equities advanced across regions in January, with Japanese stocks performing notably due to Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi's call for a snap election and commitments to further fiscal expansion. European stocks benefited from new trade agreements with Mercosur and India, easing concerns over US trade policies. U.S. equities saw more muted gains, with growth stocks lagging behind value stocks. Chinese equities rose on expectations of looser monetary policy during the year. Crude oil prices surged amid rising geopolitical tensions, while gold continued its strong rally to reach new all-time highs. All MSCI ACWI sectors gained, with energy, materials, and industrials delivering the strongest returns, while consumer discretionary, information technology, and financials lagged.

Since the target fund is USD-denominated, the return of this peso share class fund was slightly affected by a slight movement between the Philippine peso and the US dollar.
