MARKET COMMENTARY

Since bottoming out in October 2023, the PSEi has been on a steady uptrend, rallying +4.5% MoM to close at 6,944.71 in February, pushing the index up +7.7% YTD. This upward movement was fueled by improving macroeconomic indicators domestically, stable corporate earnings releases, and robust foreign inflows. Notably, the banking (+8.6% MoM) and industrials (+8.6%) sectors led the gains, while properties (-2.7%) and mining (-8.0%) ended in the red. Average volume turnover for the month stayed tepid at P5.2bn as investors lacked conviction beyond 7,000. On the flipside, foreigners were consistently buyers in the local equities market by USD129mn, extending their buying streak to 4 months.

On the macroeconomic front, the BSP maintained its policy rates unchanged in its first meeting for 2024. The BSP slightly adjusted its inflation estimates, signaling the need to keep monetary policy tight to anchor inflation expectations amid various risks, including geopolitical tensions, higher rice and electricity prices due to El Nino, and increased gasoline prices. On that note, February's inflation print surpassed expectations, at 3.4% YoY versus 3.0% market consensus and January's print of 2.8%, driven by a significant increase in rice inflation, the fastest in 15 years.
