MARKET COMMENTARY

The fund achieved both positive absolute and relative returns in October, driven by an overweight position in Asia ex-Japan stocks, which benefited from a strong rally in semiconductor equities. In developed markets, the S&P 500 rose 2.3% amid easing trade tensions and rate cut expectations, while the Nasdaq surged 4.7%, marking its seventh consecutive month of gains on robust Q3 earnings from megacap tech firms. Contributions across regions were positive, supported by the growth-oriented US allocation and the outperformance of European active managers. Additionally, transitioning from passive to low-tracking-error active funds for global mandates proved beneficial, with the newly added Nordea and Robeco funds outperforming their benchmarks over the period. Overall, the fund's positioning and active management strategies delivered solid results.
