MARKET COMMENTARY

US stocks experienced a remarkable surge in February, with key indexes such as the S&P 500, Dow Jones, and Nasdaq all witnessing significant gains. This bullish market trend was largely propelled by a cohort of standout companies, colloquially termed the "Magnificent 7," among which Meta and Nvidia were prominent due to their encouraging earnings disclosures.

On the economic front, the narrative was predominantly upbeat. The CPI exhibited a modest retreat from 3.4% to 3.1% in January, albeit falling shy of the projected 2.9% reduction. The employment sector continued to deliver positive surprises with non-farm payroll additions for January significantly outstripped the anticipated figure of 187K, clocking in at an impressive 353K new jobs. This robust performance lent credence to the Fed's decision to refrain from trimming interest rates. Contrary to expectations of an uptick, the unemployment rate held steady at 3.7% in January. Indicators of economic vitality were further bolstered by the Manufacturing and Service sector PMIs for February, both registering above the expansion threshold with readings of 51.5 and 51.3 respectively. Rounding off the economic updates, the GDP for Q4 was reported at 3.3%, marginally below the anticipated 3.8%.

The Peso appreciated against the Dollar in February to 56.20 from previous 56.28, contributing to a lower overall return of the fund.
