MARKET COMMENTARY

Global equities generally advanced, led by Japanese stocks amid strong corporate fundamentals, while US equities saw modest gains due to tech sector concerns over Al growth. European markets rose despite political uncertainties in France, and Chinese equities performed well, though emerging markets lagged behind developed markets. Volatility decreased, with the VIX index falling to 17.1, indicating market stability. Sector-wise, materials, healthcare, communication services outperformed, whereas utilities, industrials, and information technology lagged. The fund underperformed relative to the global market, driven by holdings such as Shopify and Vertex Pharmaceuticals, while underweight positions in Apple and NVIDIA, and exposure to Royal Caribbean and Meta Platforms, influenced the performance.
