MARKET COMMENTARY

The Federal Reserve and the ECB voted to keep borrowing costs unchanged, indicating that they expect no reduction in rates until inflation has moved sustainably toward 2%.

Japanese stocks were the strongest performers (TOPIX +7.8%). US equities also gained (S&P 500 +1.7%), helped by stocks with AI exposure. European shares rose (MSCI Europe +1.6%), while China weighed on emerging market returns (MSCI China -10.5%).

The yield on the 10-year US Treasury bond rose 7 basis points (bps) to 3.95% while the yield on the 10-year German Bund increased 18 bps to 2.18%. Corporate bonds held up better than government debt.

The Fund generated positive performance for the period on the back of a robust global equity markets but mixed performance in global bond markets which saw reversals in performance from December. Market participants hope for early interest rate cuts from Central Banks were scaled back as economic data continued to surprise to the upside. Vanguard Japan Stock Index was the leading contributor to performance. AB American Growth and Man GLG Japan Core Alpha also had a noticeable contribution to performance for the period. On the Bond side, Robeco Global Credit Bond was the leading contributor to performance for the month. First Sentier Asia Quality Bond and PineBridge Asia Pacific Investment Grade also had notable contribution to performance. Federated Hermes Asia ex Japan was the leading detractor to performance for the period as investors remain pessimistic about the region due to the weaker economic data from China.
